

Jannicke Hilland has been the CEO of BKK, the largest renewable energy company in Western Norway, since 2015. She has previously worked in Hydro and Statoil in various operational and management positions, including platform manager, manager of Troll B and operational manager for Gullfaks. She was director of corporate safety, security and emergency preparedness in Statoil from 2013 to 2015. She holds several directorships, amongst others she is deputy director of the board at Energy Norway and board member of the state-owned climate investment company Nysnø.

Jannicke Hilland holds a degree in electrical and electronic engineering from the University of Manchester Institute of Science and Technology and has a PhD in multiphase metering from the University of Bergen. She has also studied strategic leadership at the Norwegian School of Economics.